Rotary: Building Bridges Amidst Tariff Walls

In an increasingly interconnected world, the rise of tariff wars — most notably initiated by the United States in recent years — has rippled across global economies, shaking supply chains, inflating costs, and straining international relations. As nations recalibrate trade policies and businesses grapple with uncertainty, the spirit of collaboration faces unprecedented challenges.

Against this backdrop of economic turmoil and protectionism, Rotary stands out as a beacon of enduring unity. Our initiatives transcend national borders and political divides, reinforcing the fundamental truth that goodwill, service, and understanding are not commodities to be taxed or restricted.

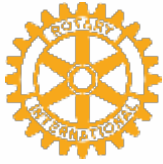

Rotary's programs — from global scholarships and peace fellowships to disease eradication and disaster relief efforts — demonstrate that cooperation fosters resilience. In times when nations might retreat into economic self-interest, Rotary fosters a global community rooted in shared purpose. We invest in projects that strengthen local economies sustainably, support entrepreneurs in underserved regions, and promote vocational training that builds self-reliance beyond the fluctuations of global trade disputes.

Moreover, Rotary's emphasis on dialogue — through international exchanges, Global Grants, and Rotary Action Groups — nurtures personal and professional bonds that tariffs and trade barriers cannot sever. Our commitment to peacebuilding and conflict resolution becomes even more vital as economic tensions threaten to spill into broader divisions.

While tariff wars may reshape global commerce, Rotary's work reminds us that true prosperity is not measured merely by balance sheets but by the strength of the human connections we build. As Rotarians, we have the privilege and responsibility to lead by example — fostering a world where cooperation triumphs over competition, and service rises above self-interest.

In these turbulent times, our initiatives are not just acts of service; they are acts of hope.

Would you also like me to suggest a few possible titles and a short, punchy quote you can place at the beginning or end for impact?

The date had been finalized as 29.06.2025 along with the venue. I have the belive that all members will continue to support the current team and make it a grand success.

My confidence comes from the unity shown by all my RCSS Family. We have been trying our level best to involve reach and every member and each of you have given your best in being involved as and when it was possible.

Now this last event in June is about 8 weeks away and we need to get weave the RCSS magic wand (our unity) and see to it that that we come out in flying colors.

We need to register as Patrons, we need to give the subcommittee all the support they require (however small the work may be), we need to get sponsors - both Co-sponsors or associate sponsors for the event, we need to get adverts for the proposed magazine/ souvenir, we need help - at the registrations, at the food stalls, the hitea, the drinks, and a host of other areas. Power of Immunization, New WHO guideline to prevent adolescent pregnancies, End Malaria

New WHO Guideline Aims to Prevent Adolescent Pregnancy and Save Lives

More than 21 million adolescent girls become pregnant each year in low and middle-income countries, around half of which are unintended. With impacts on girls' education, social connection and future employment prospects, early pregnancy can create cycles of intergenerational poverty that become difficult to break. It also brings serious health risks, including relatively higher rates of infections and preterm births as well as complications from unsafe abortions – linked to particular challenges in accessing safe and respectful care.

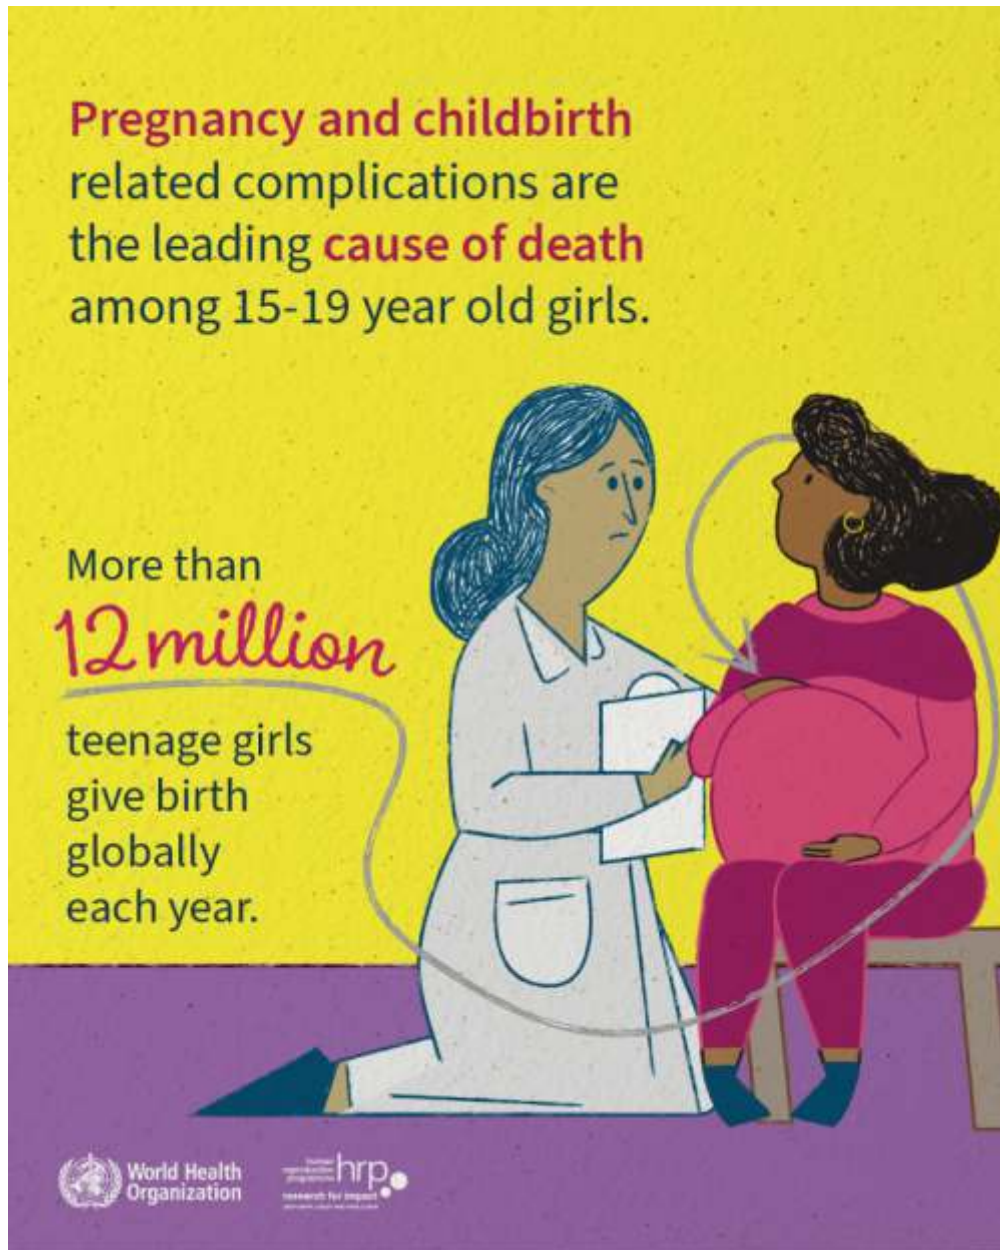

In response, WHO has released a new guideline focused on preventing adolescent pregnancy and addressing the significant health risks it brings.

Among other strategies, the guideline urges rapid action to end child marriage, extend girls' schooling, and improve access to sexual and reproductive health services and information – all critical factors for reducing early pregnancies among teenagers around the world.

Immunization for All is Humanly Possible

Vaccines are one of humanity's greatest achievements. Over the last 50 years, essential vaccines have saved at least 154 million lives. That's 6 lives a minute, every day, for five decades.

There are more lives to be saved by building on these achievements. The future of immunization means not only reaching millions of children who have never received a single shot, but protecting grandparents from influenza, babies from malaria and RSV, pregnant mothers from tetanus, and young girls from HPV.

Decades of collaborative efforts between governments, aid agencies, scientists, healthcare workers, and parents got us to where we are today — a world where we've eradicated smallpox and almost eradicated polio.

World Immunization Week 2025 highlights that "Immunization for All is Humanly Possible" by showing how communities can enjoy less disease and more life through vaccines. It also calls on governments to strengthen immunization programmes, turning vaccines into real protection for everyone.

Learn more about how vaccines work, how they're developed and distributed and how their safety is carefully monitored: Vaccines explained

Vaccines: Myths, Facts and what WHO says

Should kids just “get the disease” instead of being vaccinated? Can vaccines really overwhelm a child’s immune system? Who decides what vaccines we get—and why? If you’re a new parent with questions about vaccines, you’re not alone.

World Immunization Week 2025

vaccination saves a life.

IMMUNIZATION FOR ALL IMMUNIZATION FOR ALL IMMUNIZATION FOR ALL IMMUNIZATION FOR ALL IMMUNIZATION FOR ALL IMMUNIZATION FOR ALL

Malaria Ends With Us: Reinvest, Reimagine, Reignite.

This World Malaria Day, WHO is calling for revitalized efforts at all levels, from global policy to community action, to accelerate progress towards malaria elimination.

In the late 1990s, world leaders laid the foundation for remarkable progress in global malaria control, including preventing more than 2 billion cases of malaria and nearly 13 million deaths since 2000.

To date, WHO has certified 45 countries and 1 territory as malaria-free, and many countries with a low burden of malaria continue to move steadily towards the goal of elimination. Of the remaining 83 malaria-endemic countries, 25 reported fewer than 10 cases of the disease in 2023.

We know how to end malaria. The choice is ours: act now or risk losing ground. Ending malaria is not just a health imperative; it is an investment in a more equitable, safer and prosperous future for every nation.

Live and let live

World Immunization Week, celebrated in the last week of April, aims to highlight the collective action needed and to promote the use of vaccines to protect people of all ages against disease.

Through its convening power, WHO works with countries across the globe to raise awareness of the value of vaccines and immunization and ensures that governments obtain the necessary guidance and technical support to implement high quality immunization programmes.

The ultimate goal of World Immunization Week is for more people – and their communities – to be protected from vaccine-preventable diseases.

Over the last 50 years, essential vaccines have saved at least 154 million lives. That's 6 lives a minute, every day, for five decades.

In these 50 years, vaccination accounts for 40% of the improvement in infant survival, and more children now live to see their first birthday and beyond than at any other time in human history. Measles vaccine alone accounts for 60% of those lives saved.

There are more lives to be saved by building on these achievements. The future of immunization means not only reaching millions of children who have never received a single shot, but protecting grandparents from influenza, babies from malaria and RSV, pregnant mothers from tetanus, and young girls from HPV.

We are at a watershed moment in the history of global health. Hard-won gains in stamping out diseases that are preventable through vaccination are in jeopardy. Decades of collaborative efforts between governments, aid agencies, scientists, healthcare workers, and parents got us to where we are today — a world where we've eradicated smallpox and almost eradicated polio.

Under the banner, 'Immunization for All is Humanly Possible', World Immunization Week 2025 aims to ensure even more children, adolescents, adults – and their communities – are protected against vaccine-preventable diseases.

Vaccines are proof that less disease, more life is possible when we put our minds to it. It's time to show the world that Immunization for All is Humanly Possible.
